Taxis

Hail taxi cab from the street or stand only in emergency, It is much cheaper to call for one. When you call, ask the operator when the taxi will arrive and then look for car plastered with number of company you called.

There is taxi "mafia" operating from stands near railway station, popular clubs, hotels etc. - avoid these rip-offs, they are very expensive!

Taxi fare within the centre shouldn't cost you more than about 12-15 zł. Fare from left side of the river (Lewobrzeże) to the right side (Prawobrzeże) or the other way is about 40-50 zł. Fares during the night are slightly more expensive. All officially registered taxis have meters, the driver should turn them on just after you enter. For payment have cash ready, only the minority of taxi drivers have necessary equipment for payments with debit or credit cards. If you have any questions just ask the driver.

SURVIVAL GLOSSARY

Polish language belongs to the Slavic languages group, along with Russian, Ukrainian, Czech or Serbian.

The first known full sentence in Polish comes from "Księga Henrykowska" from 1270 and relates to the description of daily life at that time. The husband says to his wife: "Daj, acj pobruszę, a ty poczywaj" (loosely translated: "Relax Honey, today I will do the dishes.").

The Polish alphabet (like most European alphabets) is based on the Roman alphabet and consists of 32 letters. 9 of them, however, you won't find in any other alphabet. They are: ą, ć, ę, ł, ń, ó, ś, ź, ż. And although it is these "rustling" letters that keep foreigners awake at night, Poles have clearly weakness for them.

The ranking from 2010 for the most beautiful Polish word may serve as a proof of this. It was won by... "żdźbło" (blade of grass). Other words which were also taken into account were: "szep" (whisper), "brzdęk" (plunk) and ... "szeleścić" (to rustle).

In addition to the "rustling" letters, there is another torture device for foreigners - the "digraphs", i.e.: cz, ch, sz, rz, dz, dż and dź. Compiled in different combinations, they create tongue twisters such as "Chrząszcz brzmi w trzcinie w Szczepieszynie" (In Szczepieszynie, a beetle buzzes in the reeds). Don't worry, even Poles have a problem to pronounce it correctly. :)
